

---

STEFAN FELSNER, Technische Universität Berlin

Graphs and Rectangle Dissections

From a dissection of a rectangle into smaller rectangles we can get various planar graphs. We review links between these graphs and algorithmic ideas for constructing a corresponding dissection. Then we move on to additional restrictions, e.g., the requirement that all rectangles in the dissection are squares or that the areas of rectangles are prescribed. We survey parts of the existing theory and some related problems.