
STEPHEN FINBOW, St Francis Xavier
Efficiency of Watchmen's Walks

We will discuss a method of measuring the efficiency of a watchmen's walk, where each vertex must be visited within a specified time interval and related results for small time intervals. Further explorations show every rooted tree with with relatively few leaves has a branch with a certain number of vertices and this can be used establish a conjecture of Dyer and Keeping.