
MATTHEW FRANCIS, Department of Computer Science, University of Toronto

On Segment graphs

Segment graphs are the intersection graphs of line segments in the plane. It was conjectured by Kratochvil and Kubena that the complement of every planar graph is a segment graph. We show that the counter-examples, if any, to this conjecture have to be somewhat complex planar graphs, as the complement of every partial 2-tree is a segment graph. We also look at some open problems regarding segment graphs.