

---

JING HUANG, University of Victoria

Chronological interval digraphs

Interval graphs admit elegant structural characterizations and linear time recognition algorithms; On the other hand, the usual interval digraphs lack a forbidden structural characterization as well as a low-degree polynomial time recognition algorithm. We identify a class of interval digraphs which we call chronological interval digraphs and argue that they are the most natural digraphs analogues of interval graphs. This work is joint with Das and Hell.